Book 5 in the Surf Bay Series!

Framed for a crime he didn't commit, British teenager, Finley, is given a fake passport and forced to forget the life he's always known. When he arrives in Surf Bay, he meets his uncle, Monroe, and he learns his time in America isn't going to be a vacation. From the second his plane hits the ground, he is dragged into a world of organized crime, working under his uncle's wing.

He is forced to share a tiny apartment with another of Monroe's employees, Jay, and they soon become puppets, acting out Monroe's terrible crimes, side by side. When their work starts to become increasingly more dangerous, Finley is torn between his need to obey his uncle and his need to protect Jay.

As his life spirals out of control, he falls deeper and deeper into a world filled with money, crime and power and his only form of escapism is in his growing love for Jay.

Can Finley resist the lure of a life-changing proposition from his uncle, while still protecting the one he loves, or will he make sacrifices, which could change the course of his life, forever?
