Ecology of Mediterranean Evergreen Oak Forests (Ecological Studies)

Broadleaved evergreen forests where holm oak (Quercus ilex L.) is almost the only canopy tree are a distinctive ecosystem of the Mediterranean Basin. Biogeographically, these forests lie between cool-temperate deciduous forests to the north and drier shrublands to the south. In a more general view, they are ecologically intermediate between these deciduous forests and humid warm-temperate evergreen forests, such as the laurisilva of the Macaronesian islands or the broadleaved evergreen forests of eastern Asia. Holm oak forests are characterized by small-stature trees (usually 5 to 12 m tall), which are slow growing, cast a deep shade, and have small, evergreen, sclerophyllous leaves. Summer drought is the major environmental constraint. Mediterranean broadleaved evergreen forests have been underrepresented in the open literature. For example, The Woodlands Data Set of the International Biological Program (IBP) contained data from just one holm oak forest plot, Le Rouquet in southern France (Reichle 1981). Also, some models of European forests consider just two major forest types, broad leaved deciduous and evergreen conifers, forgetting the extensive forests and woodlands of holm oak and cork oak (Quercus suber L.), which are the major evergreen oak tree species in the Mediterranean Basin. The extensive literature on Mediterranean-type ecosystems has also largely neglected these forests, being centred mostly on Mediterranean-type shrublands.
