Cioran: The Temptation to Exist

Cioran: The Temptation to Exist

This is the first collection of E. M. Cioran's essays to be published in English. Cioran was born in 1911 in a village in the Carpathians. He studied at Bucharest University and came to Paris in 1937 with a scholarship from the French Institute in Bucharest. He writes, "I have no nationality--the best possible status for an intellectual." Susan Sontag writes, "Nuance Irony, and refinement are the essence of his thinking. . . His is the kind of writing that's meant for readers who, in a sense, already know what he says. ... Cioran doesn't make any of the usual efforts to 'persuade' with his oddly lyrical chain of ideas, his merciless irony, his gracefully delivered allusions to nothing less than the while of European thought since the Greeks."
