Requested Surrender (Trust In Me) Riley Murphy

She knows he's dangerous for a woman like her. He knows she's perfect for a man like him. From their first meeting, David Hollan is intrigued because Lacy Pembroke is subconsciously hiding someone. Herself. And David wants to know why. He's patient at first. Willing to give her space, but when she breaks the rules they've set between them, he's ready to hold her accountable. One way or another, he's going to find the piece of her that's yet to be uncovered. And when he does? He intends to own it. Given an ultimatum after she gets caught coloring outside the lines of their "trial" relationship, Lacy decides to fall in with David's plans. She'll cancel her trip and spend her vacation time at his house making up for her transgression. No sweat, right? Wrong. What she doesn't count on is him going full-out Dom on her. She quickly learns why they call him the quiet one. He's dead sexy, watchful and stern at the best of times, and now that he has her all to himself, each of those things are magnified tenfold. By the time Lacy realizes that he's completely subjugated her--by way of an emotional striptease--it's too late. She's bared her soul to him, so when he requests her surrender she has no choice but to give it to him. Or does she?
