4 books. 89 Chapters. 3,779 verses. 64,766 words. One Messiah.

The group of books known as the Gospels comprise a four-perspective telling of the greatest story the world has ever known, that of our salvation. “For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, so that whosoever believes on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life,” (John 3:16). Most of us can recite that verse at will, and yet, many in the world today do not know the intricacies of how that happened. We can tell you that Jesus came to this earth, that He did some miracles, told some parables, died on a cross somewhere, and then went back into the sky, but what happened in the meantime? What about the manifold lives He touched in that brief time in which He was here? What about the Apostles, that group of men who would share their experiences with Him with countless numbers of people? What about the countless thousands who, after hearing those stories, would give their lives in His defense within only a few decades after His death? In short, how could a lowly carpenter, born to a poor family in Bethlehem and raised in Nazareth, completely turn the world upside down and impact your eternal destiny, even though He never lived to the age of 34? All these questions and more, are found to us within the pages of the first four books of the New Testament.

It has been said that the whole Bible points to this “Jeshua”; that the Old Testament points forward to His life through their prophecies, and the New Testament points back to Him through the Epistles. But it was the men who knew Him the most intimately - Peter, Andrew, James, John, Philip, Bartholomew, Thomas, Matthew, James, Thaddeus, Simon the Zealot, yes, and even Judas - who would eventually comprise the fabric of that story. Their personal experiences with Jesus would shape their whole mold of thinking, and they would carry His gospel to the four corners of the world, in search of all those who would put Him on through baptism. The four “Gospels,” called that because it tells the “good news” of Jesus Christ, are the specific accounts of four men, two apostles (Matthew and John) and two disciples (Mark and Luke), who would preserve His teachings for the world to learn from, and it is from these that we derive our hope.
