Let's Let That Are Not Yet : Inferno (National Poetry Series) Ed Pavlic

"You've been thinking to yourself that it all feels very American." Ed Pavlic's tireless, resourceful speaker is American, of indeterminate race, implicated at every conceivable point of entry into the struggles that go on "here," which is everywhere, the Inferno of the title: "if an //analogy affects an enemy then let's let // inferno the enemy inferno the enemy."

In a "Daybook" of paper stapled together by George Oppen circa 1964, he wrote:

There is the area of Lyric—the area in which one is absolutely convinced that one's emotions are an insight into reality

*and death
But values—as they say—*

—at a Dominican picnic, one summer back when there were only four of us, we sat on a blanket watching the band. Stacey gets up and walks away and a woman sitting with her kids and four—maybe?—sisters turns to me smiling and asks me a question in Spanish. The other women turn to look at me. I say I don't understand. She : your wife, she speaks es-Spaneesh? Me : no, not really. And she : Is she Dominican? And me : no, she's black. The women bounce looks off each other and back to me. Kids oblivious. She : jou mean black black? Me : yes, blackblack—

' the dark colour was so dark. . . '

Ed Pavlic is associate professor of English and director of the MFA/PhD program in creative writing at the University of Georgia.
