Big Time is the story of John, a man in his 30's, making his way up the corporate ladder whilst also making relationship mistakes and often trying to understand the opposite sex (as most men do).

Big Time was originally the back-story of Mr Big from the television series Sex and the City. It followed 10 years of Big's life from a carefree thirty-year-old banker to a married man, through his subsequent divorce, before he met Carrie in the first episode of the show. The story—from the man's perspective—gave depth to a character many viewers of the television series were attracted to yet thought of as self-centred or even narcissistic. The intent in writing the story was for the reader to get to know and understand the man who was reluctant—or even unable—to commit to Carrie in the series.

As the rights to Mr Big have not been acquired, the story has been appropriately changed so that it does not impinge on third party legal rights. As the original story was an interpretation of Mr Big, making the changes have been straightforward and no character is based on the television show, Sex and the City, or any actual person.
