This cute story with bouncy rhymes will entertain children of all ages about Earth Day, the problems going on with the planet (without too many details not to scare anyone) and the typical things to do on that day, such as recycling or planting a tree.

The story includes 21 paragraphs, which include the following:

"Earth is a few millions of years,
It is older than it appears.
Everything aging needs some care.
It needs your help, you are its heir.

With such a big population,
And not enough vegetation,
This world can't handle the pollution
Our planet needs an intervention.

But don't be sad, there is some hope
For people like you to engage,
Get together and give some help
To get rid of all the garbage.

You too can help and do your part,
To help maintain your habitat.
There is no job too big or small
It all matters in the long haul."
